Andrew Burman

Gentlemen of West London CC 1988-1997

Results, individual aggregates and debuts

Much research was needed to ascertain when players made their debuts. They are presented in one document for the first time. Individual returns are shown for each match according to club tradition – 100 or more runs, 10 or more wickets and five or more catches and stumpings. League and Cup matches are designated as follows (all others were friendlies):

BA	Bob Ashton Memorial Cup	1990-2011
PC	President's Cup T20	1992-2001
PL	Pals League	2002-2007

The club was founded during a game of golf between the Ashtons and East Harrow Cheetahs footballers Des Dolan and Denis Harvey. Upset at their creative carding, Mark Ashton bragged that he could put together a side to beat them at cricket. So the idea was birthed, although Ashton would have to wait until 1992 for his first and only win against Harvey's side, curiously with Dolan the hero.

In 1988 Mark Ashton persuaded his younger brother Bob, another fine cricketer, though one disappointed at lack of involvement in his matches for Windsor Victoria, and some friends to join him in forming a cricket team. Some had played before. Few had played more than the odd match. The 1988 Gents may not have been very experienced, but they were keen and well prepared, and against able opponents performed competently enough in two of the three matches. Whatever problems the Gents suffered from, lack of enthusiasm was not among them. Indeed, 1988 saw mid-season nets and most undignified they were too, taking place after illicit break-ins at Windsor Boys' School, the alma mater of the Ashtons, Burman and 1990 debutant Boddington, and Boston Manor Park, home of West XI, a venue and club Ashton had got to know via friend and West XI chairman Steve Haywood. There was much shuffling of feet and pointing of fingers when, having caught the culprits red-handed, the groundsman at Boston Manor demanded to know who was in charge.

The first Gents side included the Ashtons, Burman, Dolan, Gallagher, and Townley, together with Steve Haywood and Gallagher's pal Mick Stratford, who would never score a run in his Gents career but who uncomplainingly did his best every time. The XI was completed by West XI's Milton Jolin and two guests who did not realise that their own team's game with West XI had been cancelled and kindly filled in. Ian Richmond and Steve Haywood's nephew Nick Hubbucks joined for the final game. Ashton, Burman, Dolan, Gallagher, Richmond, Townley were friends from the University of York. Three other York alumni, Farr, Moor and Renvoize, would join in 1989. The club's not particularly original name was quickly agreed on.

Why was the first game against West XI, a side of two years' experience? The original Beggar opposition had scratched and the Gents filled in. The game was lost (Bignell the difference with 53) but the scratch XI was not outclassed and all deemed it fun. The tenth-wicket stand of 38 between M. Ashton and Jolin remained a record until 2002. I was decided to play two more games. Batting second both times, the team played as well as expected. Gents nearly won the game at Windsor after a long stand between R. Ashton (36) and Townley (20). Hubbucks had previously done the hat-trick.

It would have been too much for the club not to express its disappointment and Haywood tried to murder the bewildered Dolan for giving him out lbw because 'the ball hit the pad and they appealed'. Some things never change. Such a narrow margin would famously be repeated in 2002 and 2008.

The second game was an unpleasant mismatch against the cricket commando of the East Harrow Cheetahs FC, whose opening batsman flogged a ton. The Gents, in the first of many administrative faux pas within the club, failed to copy the since-lost scorebook so this man has been recorded as A.N. Other. This game provided the first of many flounces by the Gents who left straight after the game.

A season that began on a beautiful spring day at Wimbledon Park ended in scenes of desolation at Bob Ashton's funeral service, held at St Peter's Church in Windsor Great Park on 11 September. The visible signs of Bob's illness began after the Gents had shaded Enterprise in a fine match. As his health declined over the next week or so, he was admitted to Heatherwood Hospital in Ascot. When it became clear that his illness was serious, he was transferred to Brompton Hospital in Kensington. Many of the team visited him often and some, like Frank Gallagher, nightly, to keep his brother company in his vigil. Bob's condition slowly deteriorated and he died on Monday 4 September. These are the material facts of the end of a life cut short after 24 years. The effect on Bob's friends of his passing was profound; on his family beyond computation. Everyone who knew him, and Bob had many friends, regards themselves as privileged.

Those who never saw him play might be interested in what sort of player Bob was. He was a genuine quick bowler, perhaps a little below the pace of Stuart Snelling at his peak but more orthodox in the delivery stride. He was also a hard-hitting batsman with large, powerful shoulders. Clearly one of the best two players in the team, he provided constant support to the less talented. He was therefore quickly forgiven the cheap dismissals in his career due to rash strokeplay at the start of the innings, a phenomenon unknown elsewhere in the Ashton family.

The cricket played in 1989 is secondary, but as a matter of record a fair display against Enterprise (a contest that would endure till 2010), including the first club fifty (M. Ashton 76) was followed by three defeats in which the Gents were little more than a shambles. The second West XI game was a 13-a-side pantomime in which a succession of Gents batsmen gave catching practice to 11 fielders. Floppy-haired Old Etonian Arthur took 6-25, the first of a series of match-winning performances.

Bob's friend Ian Maughan stepped up. Described as 'a mate of mine who can keep wicket and bat a bit' he made an immediate impression and would go on to become one of the club's greats. He kept wicket for the first time on 24 June. One wondered if he knew what he had let himself in for, as the usual hefty total followed. R. Ashton and Townley then put on 76 before both were badly injured by lifting deliveries and retired hurt. The match was abandoned due to the dangerous pitch, Ashton having moved to a magnificent 54* off 27 balls. Both batsmen were proud of their war wounds (Townley's incurring a significant dental bill) and the evening's celebrations were long.

There followed the much dreamed-of first victory in a full game as Mark Ashton and Maughan posted a then-record 111 fourth wicket stand against Enterprise in Hounslow after the usual early innings trauma. A long stand between the friendly, long-haired Aussie Dave Marsh and Tony Hill then saw Enterprise well on their way before Moor bowled them both. For the first, but certainly not the last time, Ashton came back to capture the last three wickets, including the dangerous Gupta for 28, with Enterprise in sight of victory.

After the funeral, the remaining fixtures were cancelled. As a postscript, in the close season the club decided after much thought to continue in 1990. It was the captain's call really; if he could do it, so could everybody else. West XI's Milton Jolin bought a cup, the Bob Ashton Memorial Cup, which was contested till 2011.

Other debutants included Simon Alderman (introduced by John Townley), Roger Farr and the late Ian Renvoize (University of York alumni), and Phil Hill, who would prove an important contributor. Mark Ashton became the first player to score 100 runs and take 10 wickets in a season, feats he would never tire of repeating. The Gents were beginning to look like a cricket team.

This was a losing season, but a cherished one. The club through necessity expanded its squad. Five players who would improve the club's fortunes played their first game; Mark Ashton's friend from Windsor Grammar School Nick Boddington (who introduced the enigmatic John Black), wicket-keeper Richard Sambrook Smith (introduced by Alderman), Steve Bignell from West XI and Rich Wilman (a colleague of Burman's). All would contribute soundly. The Gents were still itinerant and badly needed a good home venue, as well as a strike bowler and a couple of batsmen. What they did have was oodles of team spirit and an experienced captain. In those early days, playing cricket was still a novelty and the inevitable politics of amateur sports clubs had not yet surfaced.

The season was topped and tailed with two splendid games at Victoria RG, Surbiton, the best venue the Gents had yet played at. It was another losing season after results but was enjoyable with a good, hard series for the inaugural Bob Ashton Memorial Cup, won 2-1 by West XI. That was as close as it was going to get for a while. The early part of the season, dominated by the bat of Maughan (three fifties) and the deceptive outswing of Alderman (13 wickets) saw three victories. The second saw five losses out of six games.

1990 began with a sun-kissed win against Enterprise on a blistering April Sunday. Both innings featured a century partnership (Tait/Radmall 117, Maughan/Ashton 115). Four weeks later it was off to North Acton to meet West XI, a 65-run stand for the second wicket between Boddington and Maughan setting up the first win against this opposition. The Gents would have to make it last, for they would not get another one in this series until July 1992. It was a useful experience for the club to see how even experienced opponents could fall apart when things went against them. On a damp day a week later, on the barren moonscape of Cranford Park, a sensational 5-21 by Alderman helped by two stumpings on debut from Sambrook Smith set up another win against Enterprise.

When the strong Cheetahs came to town, the lack of support bowling became apparent. Maughan was interestingly tried as a bowler for the first time and got a four-wicket haul with his idiosyncratic round-arm style, but was savaged for 47 runs in seven overs. His six overs against the same team four weeks later cost 49 runs, eleven of them wides in one unforgettable over. This loss was followed by a sound win in Fulham against Old Cubbonians, a game marred by a river of toxic waste in human form flooding the ground, whose game of football frequently overlapped with the cricket. A savage Maughan 56, well supported by Boddington (39*), saw a good away win against a side who would never beat the Gents, though they came close once or twice.

West XI played well to win at Boston Manor on the hottest day in London last century. It was the year that batting records tumbled all over England, Lancashire's 863 against Surrey being the highest in England since 1938. It had been a hot, dry summer but all good things come to an end. It rained and rained a week later in Warren Farm, Southall in the hours leading up to the West XI decider. Several Gents didn't want to play, but the tea had been prepared, conditions were the same for both sides, went the argument, so let's go ahead. West XI won easily. Enterprise shaded a close final game and the season was over.

All of these goings on were reported in editions 1 to 3 of The Gent while West XI's Yes...No...Sorry! appeared twice during the season. Reaction from the circuit was positive which was kind given their rather scruffy pre-Windows appearance. Let it be acknowledged here that West XI's mouthpiece was the first out of the traps.

Though the first winning season, 1991 was less satisfying than 1990, mainly because the pitches were poor for batting, Gunnorsbury Park's pitches notably so. There were two tables there and eight years later Gents would return to play one more fitted to batting, to the north. The Enterprise and West XI batsmen got to grips but no other side did. Nor were away venues much better. A series of shoot-outs resulted, exciting maybe but demoralising for those who favoured an even contest between bat and ball. These facts should be adduced when a claim is made that council pitches were better in the old days.

West XI beat Gents 3-0 and nobody made the great leap forward, Boddington being most surprised to cop both All-rounder and Most Improved awards at the AGM. Ashton carried the batting, scoring three fifties, although the bowling, helped by the awful pitches, and catching improved. Sambrook Smith rightly won Fielder of the year with some dazzling displays behind the timbers and everyone's fielding went up a notch or two. The Gents bumped along stormily, keeping the tabloids happy with performances that were like the little girl in H.W. Longfellow's poem, either very good indeed or horrid. Teams take their lead from the captain and though Ashton's body language may have left a lot to be desired during the defeats, he led well on the pitch but could not do it all on his own, particularly against a side as good as West XI were this term.

In April Enterprise's openers Mike Hughes and Ron Stefan leathered an overconfident Gents with no pre-season practice, the winning margin of 88 runs being in no way deceptive. A tight win against London Owls was then gained in a bizarre, rainy conflict. Only two Gents bowlers, Ashton and Moore, were used and a record six lbws were given. Charles Arthur's bowling on a poor Gunnorsbury Park wicket was too much three weeks later before two more solid displays saw a five-wicket defeat of Old Cubbonians and a typical piece of Ashton rabbit-shooting against Enterprise. Two terrible performances against the Cheetahs sandwiched a win against Weasels in a sun-kissed inaugural fixture in which the tall left-hander Boddington took 4-12, following up with 46*, a virtuoso performance. An exciting return against Old Cubbonians then followed. On an evil wicket, Ashton's 61* was of the highest quality, while Boddington gave him staunch support. Phil Hill was at this time a bowler of some pace and he extracted menacing lift from the pitch.

The last two matches saw Daniel Todd's first games. He would have much success in the ensuing years before leaving to concentrate on his duties as a Conservative councillor. Fed up with West XI's ragging, he opted to join the Gents. On debut, placed at fine leg against New Barbarian Weasels his attention span was threatened after five minutes of inactivity, so he marched up to slip where he took a sharp catch within seconds. This match was the highlight of the season against opponents who in this era set the standard on and the pitch. A sun-kissed afternoon saw Gents run riot (Wilman's only fifty and 93* from Ashton off just 54 balls) on an artificial strip at the Metropolitan Police ground only for the hosts to fight back bravely with a century of their own from Best. After that, Gents were never going to lose to a seven-man Enterprise side and Ashton's hat-trick off the first three balls, including Hughes bowled first ball, ended the summer on a high.

This was the year of the move to Surbiton and the flat, true wickets of Victoria Recreation Ground, to become the club's home until 2006. This season saw plenty of high-scoring games, including the first Gents' century and its first piece of silverware, the inaugural President's Cup. From the middle of June the Gents were consistent, although by then the Bob Ashton Memorial Cup was again West XI's after two early season defeats.

The profile of the team was changing. Todd had a successful first full season, winning Bowler and Most Improved awards. The diffident but talented Wilman played more regularly and won All-rounder. With Sambrook Smith again keeping wicket well and Ashton (440 runs), Boddington and Hubbucks (playing more and blossoming as a result) also having solid seasons, the results improved. On a cool, damp May day, Hubbucks (67) and Ashton (137*, the club's maiden century with 14 fours and five sixes) put on 156 against Enterprise, a stand not bettered until 2007. Undaunted, Enterprise fought brilliantly and fell only just short. The team was on a roll but the Old Cubbonians contained warning signs which the Gents ignored. Towards the end of the Cubbonians' innings, the hosts' cricket fell apart. What would happen when good batsmen met a patchy attack on a true Surbiton wicket? A week later, they would find out.

There was dark sorrow in the run up to the West XI game when the news came through of the death of Stefan Meininger in a car crash in Germany. Stefan had guested in 1991. The Gents were then shaken to their very foundations by West XI. Once Clyde Seale and Charles Arthur got in, it was mayhem, 135 runs of it, all the way. The bowlers went for 263 and Gents were never close. Results then plummeted, a narrow loss on Wandsworth Common against London Owls (whose batting heroes included Bill Murphy, who would join in 1994), followed by another resounding West XI victory at Boston Manor. That made it 3-3 for the season.

The recovery was impressive. Three successive games were then won and a fourth tied down by the Thames at Richmond a week later as a relaxed West XI reversed their batting order. The Owen-inspired Weasels beat the Gents for the first time before the good form came back, Cheetahs being beaten for the only time in a petulant game. A fortnight later came that wonderful first battle with London Saints, who needed two to win off the last possible ball, bowler Todd keeping his nerve. A club that had bounced back well deserved some silverware and duly got it. The first President's Cup was won in rain and gales and won well, guest Clyde Seale, who could do nothing wrong all year, thrashing 51 in the first game to complement Townley's composed 39*. This was the inaugural President's Cup innings and nobody really knew what a par score was. In the event, 124 was too much for a Weasels side who would learn their lesson and would record hat-tricks of victories in this competition from 1993-1995 and 1997-1999. FC Chad reduced the Gents to 9-3 off eight overs in the second game but then had to expose their support bowlers to Boddington, Ashton, guest Tony Hill and Dolan. Few minded the anti-climax of a convincing defeat by a mellower Cheetahs outfit in the September rain.

This was a wonderful season, thanks to the quality of players Mark Ashton had at his disposal. Steve Bignell, frustrated by the lack of use of his talents by West XI's captain Arthur, joined as an opening batsman but would also take 25 wickets. Mike Hughes joined to great effect and with Ashton put up a record club fifth-wicket stand of 152 against London Saints. Bignell and Hubbucks set a first-wicket record stand against Enterprise. David Thornicroft and Mark Burville joined in the second half of the summer. The late Ian Renvoize played in almost every game and produced the best cricket of his short life. Daniel Todd began to shine as a genuine all-rounder. Ashton himself was in superb form, doubling his wickets total and scoring 490 runs. The result was 14 wins, a club record until 2000.

After a crucial and brilliant assault by Todd on Kanthan's leg-spin (20 coming in one over) in the first West XI match, Bignell ground out 38* in 50 overs in searing heat against London Saints. It was not enough, for a classic game was lost to a scrambled two off the last possible ball following a maiden declaration. The second declaration had a happier outcome. A marathon Bignell/Ashton stand of 60 at King's College was the precursor to a Weasels' total of 48 all out, guest Phil Hill sniffily refusing to contemplate their addition to West XI's card because 'they are not up to our standard'. The ensuing controversy, during which a UN Peace Envoy was summoned, was most amusing, the game a freak. The Bob Ashton Memorial Cup was won for the first time with an accomplished Gents' display in riot-torn circumstances on 4 July.

On a warm President's Cup Sunday, FC Chad's 102 was overturned by a Hughes/Hubbucks thrash, but a brilliant 52* by Bill Flack in the final beat the Gents, despite another whirlwind Hughes fifty. The game with London Owls on 5 September is a strong candidate for the most remarkable in the club's history. The visitors never looked like losing a wicket as Bulmer and Maddocks smashed every batting record in the annals of the club: highest stand, highest second innings total and the first of only two Gents defeats by 10 wickets. It had, however, been a glorious season. It had also been a long one, and only nine were available for the final game, but on a warm, sunny late-September Sunday, despite rain all week, eight catches were taken as Urban Associates were overpowered, Maughan and Thornicroft bludgeoning the Gents to victory as the autumn twilight set in.

This was another great campaign. The sun shone, right, Dhruv Patel and Bill Murphy were first seen in Gents colours, Hubbucks with five fifties was the first to 500 runs in a season, five batsmen scored over 200 for the first time and the Bob Ashton Cup was retained 2-1 after the Boston Manor jinx (and an injury to Ashton) saw a loss in the first leg. The runs came in torrents, while Ashton, with good support from the best bowling attack yet fielded, was bowling sides out.

The Wandham game is a pivotal part of club history. Burman's colleagues Dhruv Patel and Jim Wright volunteered and opened with the new ball. Wright was successful with a caught Hughes at the wicket in his first over, but an impressive ton from Wilson set the Gents a tough challenge. Fortunately, Hubbucks (96) was in unstoppable form and with Wright broke the back of Wandham's bowling with a stand of 129. Both Wright and Patel liked what they saw and opted to become full members, which was interesting in the light of the undignified incidents at the winter 1993 AGM, when stalwarts Townley and Alderman had objected to the signing of new players, only to be shouted down by chairman Ashton.

What happened on 3 July stretched the bounds of imagination. On a hot day, the Gents had to win to keep alive their hopes of retaining the Bob Ashton Memorial Cup, but key players were missing. This game was Renvoize's last, while Sambrook Smith, who had crucially bowled Arthur with a full-toss, would only return for the 1998 tenth anniversary game. Fine Urban Associates and New Barbarian Weasels sides gained victories of merit. After distinguishing themselves by conceding seven runs off one ball thanks to four Ashton overthrows, the Gents were never going to beat Urbans with only three main bowlers. Simon Alderman, not being asked to bowl, resigned soon after while heavyweight Weasels Flack and Kirkwood compiled a seismic fifth-wicket stand of 84 a fortnight later to smash their side to victory to defeat in under 21 overs.

Warm, late summer sun saw some splendid matches. West XI's own form had slumped. They arrived at a damp, cold Wimbledon Park where Wright induced a c&b off Gents nemesis Arthur for 1 and the innings slumped, the last six wickets falling for ten runs. Boddington (27*) then steered Gents to a deserved triumph, the club showing what they had learned from the captain, injured for this game.

This was a year of great importance in the club's development when Stuart Snelling, 23, and Sanjay Patel, 22 were first seen in Gents' colours. It was a batsman's summer with Ashton scoring 503 runs and Rotherham SC's Mick Walker posting the highest score by an opponent until Elmes of Northfields beat it in 2015. The Gents' aggregate of runs (2,882) was the highest yet and for the first time the Gents averaged 150 per innings. Six consecutive wins were recorded in midsummer.

The Gents won at Boston Manor Park for the first time and went on to record a hat-trick of Bob Ashton Memorial Cup wins. The Gents also benefited from the increased availability of Burville, Wright and D. Patel. Off the field, the wooden Victoria RG pavilion was burned down minutes after the Casuals clash. Cricketing matters were put into perspective with the death from cancer just after the end of the season of New Barbarian Weasels bowler Simon Lloyd at the age of just 28.

Snelling, introduced by Todd (whose batting all summer was a revelation), enjoyed watching the win against Urban Associates and joined, only to be carted all over a postage stamp ground by Walker a week later. The Gents needed a stiffer test for the first West XI clash than a 203-run win against a weak Enterprise and so it proved, Arthur putting the game beyond reach having been dropped five times. One wondered, as one did with Mr Maughan in 1989, if the quick bowler knew what he had let himself in for. Sanjay Patel debuted with 41 against London Saints and caught three off namesake Ketan. After completing his studies he would take up membership in 1997.

Ashton (51) and Wright (5-22) dominated the sodden inaugural Virgin Casuals game but Richmond's influence was crucial. He stayed with Ashton for 15.3 overs as they slowly built a winning score, despite much sledging. A last over win resulted in a gentle declaration friendly away to London Owls, that included a Gents' total made in under 26 overs and Bulmer's middle-stump being knocked out of the ground by Snelling first ball. The chanceless match-winning stand by Ashton and Wright against West XI was the highlight of the season, Gents going on to take the rubber 2-1. New Barbarian Weasels deservedly retained the President's Cup as boundaries flowed all over Berrylands on a sunny afternoon.

The club faced problems in 1996 but had another winning season under captaincy from Ashton that Wright described at the autumn AGM as inspirational. A series of tight finishes made for excitement all the way, the squad deserving credit for bouncing back after a losing spell to win their last four games and regain the President's Cup. The Bob Ashton Cup was retained in a drawn series. Both Ashton and Patel had superb summers with the bat, Ashton scoring 493 runs and All-rounder of the Year Patel 322. These two and Snelling dominated the averages.

The clash with Urban Associates in a Merton storm was bad-tempered. In pitch black, Young and Adams were somehow allowed to add a then-record 41 for the tenth wicket to nick a win amid some of the most bizarre incidents ever seen in a Gents game. As lightning crashed, 'keeper Burville and silly mid-on Ashton collided going for the winning catch, Urbans thinking it was deliberate, to give them a chance. Eleven men tried to captain at the same time and an irate Mr Snelling inflicted serious damage on a changing room door.

Nine weeks before, a classic had been played out against FC Chad. Catches galore were dropped but a brutal Todd 58* set up a brave reply. Chad went for the win at all times and were only five balls from a draw when D. Patel bowled the last batsman in the 49th. over, the most ever bowled by the Gents. During the 1995 AGM, Wright had been elected vice-captain and shaped up well when he took the reins, as he did for this game. Virgin Casuals beaten off the last ball in a marvellous match as Burman and Snelling scrambled the winning run after some good work by Hughes, Boddington, Patel and guest Mitchell.

The President's Cup was won on a day of low scoring. Mr Hill rightly copped the Man of the Tournament award for his astonishing 6-8 against FC Chad and brutal 26 in the final against Weasels. These two games saw The Gents unrecognisable from the outfit who suffered five losses in July and early August. The side had held together in difficult, often turbulent, circumstances, winning two cups and 13 matches.

Tony Buck, his friend Colin Naish (both from FC Chad) and hard Geordie Chris Mitchell (a friend of Ashton's), who famously 'felt nowt' when nutting the ground after stopping a boundary, were first seen in Gents colours. Buck would go on to play 219 times.

Despite being beset by injuries and a spell of horrid, damp weather, Gents had another winning season, their seventh in succession, but it is to the table of appearances that the keen reader should be directed, for it is there that the clues reside for explaining just what a fine summer this was. The 1997 season vindicated the recruitment drive of the previous winter. Morale was high and guest appearances were reduced to in 19 matches. Responsibility was therefore shared around. The sequence of matches that Ashton missed was important in that it showed the club was no longer reliant on its main all-rounder and mentor. All season, D. Patel, new recruit S. Patel, Wright, Snelling and the rest shouldered the extra responsibility.

The five new members fitted like a glove, being friendly and reliable, the Bob Ashton Trophy was retained after a good May victory (and reinforced with a superb batting display in Brentford), and although the President's Cup was lost, there were enough positive memories to illuminate the darkest winter. It was generally a low-scoring season, no surprise after the heavy early summer rain, which caused the cancellation of two matches in June.

The first half of the season was notable for finger injuries to Ashton, Burman and Murphy. Ashton's had to be the most dramatic and as he typically deferred going to the hospital, immediate surgery and a six-match absence was the result. His last game before the enforced break saw victory against a West XI side beset by late arrivals, the Gents' first convincing performance of the season. Chris Mitchell's maiden fifty against 12 Angry Men was cheered to the rafters. S. Patel gave him elegant support and an excellent spell from D. Patel, in which Gents nemesis Neil Hadfield was caught Hughes in the slips for nought, provided the killer blow. A glut of runs in Brentford with heavy scoring by the top order saw the Bob Ashton Cup retained on 20 July.

After an easy President's Cup win against FC Chad, the Gents were put to the sword in the final. Bowlers, incapable of bowling to defensive fields, and batsmen, who simply panicked, all underperformed and Weasels took full advantage, thoroughly deserving their victory. The late Ernie Tattersdill became the first opponent to score a fifty and take four wickets. The season ended with two relaxed fixtures, Snelling moving on to a haul of 40 wickets and S. Patel scoring his first fifty.

This season was the climax of five successful years in which 64 of 97 games were won. But change was afoot. Ashton would miss most of the following season, Wright would move briefly to New Zealand and Mitchell would only play a few more games.
